

Molly Anderson

Why I Serve on the Board: I think that the coop is a vital gathering place in Middlebury that fosters community, and I want to support it in any way that I can. I'm also a committed cooperator --- coops are an important business model that allows community ownership and participation.

My Favorite Co-op Item: hard to pick---maybe artichoke hearts, or Equal Exchange coffee, or smoked Mozzarella!

About Me: I've been a coop member since the 1970s, in food coops in Colorado, North Carolina, Massachusetts, Maine and now Vermont. My professional area is sustainable food systems: I'm the Academic Director of the Food Studies Program at Middlebury College and I teach and write about agroecology, equity and sustainability in food systems.
